

Acknowledgments

There are many people I would like to thank for helping me along the way. Carole DeSanti, my editor, gave invaluable direction that changed me and my writing and was consistently kind and compassionate. Connie Clausen, my beloved agent, shared the vision. Without her humor, clarity, and straight talk, this book would never have been as much fun to write. My late father, Sam Handelsman, imparted to me his love of words and enriched my life with his intellect. Although he claimed he was an atheist, he passed on a pantheism of sorts, extending to me his wonder at the mysteries of "Mother Nature." Larry Blue helped me from the very beginning in countless ways. It is to him I owe a debt of gratitude for insisting in 1987 that I "join the twentieth century and learn the computer." Wade Roberts at Sherman Library and Gardens befriended me and backed me, lending his encouragement and time. For all he has given, I am grateful. I admire my dear friend Jana Ruzicka, for her kindred spirit, her unbridled creativity and clear-sighted articulation of those things ineffable. Z'ev Rosenberg helped me come back to life. Jacqueline Welles inspired me and made me laugh. Mimi Nelson has been a second mother. Rochelle Reed-Smith helped shape my focus in the early stages, graciously giving me the benefit of her sophisticated overview and highly developed expertise. Maury Solomon read my first attempts, shared her opinions, and gave encouragement. I appreciate my friend Craig Fisher for his company, great conversation, and goodness and Bob Nero, for being the Buddha in the Venice garden. Charline Grogan was very generous with herself. Linda Blinn recognized a flower fairy. Gep Durenberger, at the Decorative Arts Study Center, appreciated the manuscript in its incipient stages and urged me to continue. For his warmth and compassionate nature, I salute him. Linda Weidlinger at the library of the C. G. Jung Institute of Los Angeles offered enthusiastic assistance. I honor Jennifer Hagl, a beloved friend and an imaginative gardener, for the sensitive and artistic way she does everything. Eileen King shared her clarity and understanding of Anthroposophy in a very personal, articulate, and loving way. I thank Sherry Wildfeuer, editor of the Stella Natura, the Kimberton Hills Agricultural Calendar, a publication of the Biodynamic Farming and Gardening Association. Sherry's writing illuminated Anthroposophy and Biodynamics for me. Linda Binley made astute and thought-provoking suggestions. Deborah Rogers gave moral support. Karen Klein offered a fresh eye. Greg Smith found my favorite poem when I thought all was lost. Most of all, I thank the plant kingdom for giving me this book to write.
